

Aircraft Co. Owner Sees 'Discs' Four Nights In Row

LOS ANGELES (UP)—An aircraft company owner said today he was amazed at the increasing "audacity" of strange, disc-like objects he has seen cavorting in the sky over Los Angeles for the past four nights.

Edwin C. Johnston, owner of Aircraft Hydroforming, which manufactures airplane parts, said he watched two "flying saucers" streaking over the Northrop aircraft plant in near-by Hawthorne for the fourth night in a row.

He said at least 25 witnesses have watched the saucers, including one of his employes, Jack Swinburn.

Johnston said the objects have been sighted at the same time each night, between 7 and 8 p.m., and each night in approximately the same area.

"We were waiting for them last night," he said "We figured they would come back, and they did."

He said he was amazed at the "audacity of these things."

"They sit up there in the sky in full sight of everyone and only seem to disappear when they want to," he said.

Johnston said the "saucers" apparently "like our neighborhood."

Swinburn said the two objects resembled pulsating stars and were high in the clear, evening sky.

"But they weren't stars," he said. "They stood still for a while, then shot off. They were being controlled by something."

Swinburn described the objects as having platter-like shapes. One side appears to glow, and the other is a dark bluish color, he said.

"They sort of flip over on their dark sides before they zip off," Swinburn explained.
